On 19 August 1863 the Adjutant General ordered that:

Volunteer regiments, battalions and squadrons will inscribe on their colors their proper numerical designation and the arm of the service to which they belong, with the letters O.V.M. They may also wear upon their colors the name of their city or county, or both.

This order probably relates to inscriptions on national colors.

Oregon

were withdrawn in 1861, and to a lesser extent in countering the operations of pro-Confederate bands and lawless elements in general.

The volunteer regiments were aided from time to time by militia companies of forty or fifty men which served for a few months at a time. One example was Lieutenant Nathan Olney's mounted company which was outfitted by the citizens of The Dalles and which in 1864 was mustered into Federal service for four months to guard one of the main roads through the state.

Oregon troops of the two volunteer Civil War regiments were uniformed, accoutered and armed by the War Department with regulation equipage; all other commands served without uniforms and carried privately owned small arms. The men of the 1st Volunteer Cavalry Regiment were required to furnish their own horses and horse equipment, but all other "clothing, arms and equipments . . . [were] procured by requisition upon the commanding officer of the District of Oregon or the Department of the Pacific." Actually the clothing was issued in San Francisco. The same procedure was followed by the 1st Volunteer Infantry. The state itself issued no equipage.

As a territory Oregon used a coat of arms which included a ship and mountains, among other things, had an Indian and an eagle as supporters, and a beaver for the crest. Upon admission to statehood her legislature adopted an even more complicated device consisting of a shield with two ships, an emigrant wagon, a sheaf of wheat and several agricultural implements, a deer, and other objects. Over the shield flew an American eagle and across it ran the words: "THE UNION."

A button was manufactured bearing the territorial device; when and by whom it was used has not been discovered. Later buttons with the state arms were probably adopted after 1872 but some may have been worn earlier. No information is known about Oregon military flags and the probability is that both regiments carried U.S. regulation colors, standards and guidons if any were carried at all. The companies assigned to these regiments rarely served together and flags were only a hindrance in Indian fighting.

Oregon military companies commenced to form or reform soon after the Civil War, but it does not appear that any higher organizations were established until after 1872.

Re: Question re Schaeffer's Zouaves (122/K)

Hello Tom,

I think I can help you with this. There is a brief description of their uniform in their regimental history. The "Schaeffer Zouaves", were also known, the "First City Zouaves" before they became Co. K. 122nd Pa Infantry 8/12/62-5/15/63. Also a brief description is in a pamphlet from their 20th reunion in 1883. Best though is that I have actually seen the remnants of an original uniform held in a local private collection. The design and piping was based on Dureya's 5th NY.

>Color of trousers-Blue [not dark and but not sky]

>Did trousers have a stripe? If yes, what color?-Red

>Color of jacket-Blue [same as Pantaloon trousers]

>Color of piping on jacket-Red

>Color of sash-Red

>Color of cap (fez)-Blue [Light Blue but not as light as sky blue of say the VRC]

>Color of tassel on cap-Red

They also had the white leggings.

I hope this helps. Would you please possibly send me a picture of your work when you are done? It would be a cool addition to my 122nd Pa file.

Regards,

Ron

Hi--

I paint Civil War military miniatures and am currently working on ACW zouaves. I have already painted over 50 figures is different zouave dress. I would like to add Schaeffer's Zouaves to my collection but have been unable to find any information re the colors of their zouave outfits--ideally, would like to know:

"Holsters for Remington revolvers"	228
"Holsters for Starr revolvers"	722
"Holsters for State cavalry pistols"	782

In 1870 Pennsylvania drew from the general government its first breechloaders—4500 "Springfield breech-loading rifle muskets, model 1868" with accounterments, "the same gun with which the United States troops are armed." Twenty-five hundred were issued to the 1st Division, and 1,250 to the 18th Division that year. The others went out on a company basis. Most of the new companies that year were issued "short" Leman (Leaman) muskets. At this point the Commonwealth still retained over 15,000 muzzle-loading muskets, almost all of antiquated pattern, but the change-over to breech-loaders had begun and was to continue steadily thereafter.

Although not within the scope of this study, mention should be made of the great Fort Pitt heavy ordnance works at Pittsburgh. It was one of the largest and most complete cannon foundries in the world at that time, capable of producing the heaviest guns. It remained in continuous operation throughout the Civil War.

Colors and Flags

The coat of arms of Pennsylvania, bearing a ship under full sail, a plow and three sheaves of grain, with two rampant horses for supporters and the motto "Virtue, Liberty and Independence," was adopted during the American Revolution and formally established in 1809. In one form or another these arms were in use during the period of this study.

As early as 1799 the Pennsylvania legislature resolved to provide two colors or standards for each regiment of militia or Volunteers in its service. Both colors were to be to the same size: 4.5 feet on the staff and 6.5 feet on the fly. One was made of dark blue silk and had an American eagle bearing the arms of the Commonwealth painted in the center. In its upper left corner was placed the regimental designation encircled by 13 white stars. The other color was the Stars and Stripes, in whose canton was the same regimental designation and white stars.

It is not known how long colors of these designs were in use or, indeed, if they ever were in these forms. Although regimental colors are reported in the 1850's as being among Commonwealth stores, we have no record of their actual issue to troops prior to 1861.

The steps taken by Pennsylvania to provide colors at the outbreak of the Civil War are of particular interest. A joint resolution of the legislature of 16 May required the governor to provide "regimental standards" for all "regiments now in the field or forming," or to be formed during the war. Those that bore the same numbers as regiments raised in earlier wars were to bear the names of the actions in which the older regiments had distinguished themselves. Colors were to be replaced as necessary, and at the end of a regiment's service they were to be returned to the Adjutant General to have new battle honors enscribed on them.

The collection of Civil War colors at Harrisburg, like most state flag collections, is not helpful in determining if these provisions were carried out or in discovering even the most general characteristics of Civil War flags. However, a detailed list of all colors issued commands and returned by them between September 1861 and July 1866 is given in the Report of the Adjutant General for 1866, pages 16–19. Judging from this list, about two-thirds of the infantry regiments received two or more colors, the remainder but one. Cavalry regiments received either one or two standards plus ten guidons.

On 10 September 1861 the regiments of the Pennsylvania Reserve Corps, then at Tennellytown, Md., were presented with their colors. President Lincoln, Governor Curtin of Pennsylvania, and many distinguished persons were present. The governor explained how he had used money provided by the Society of the Cincinnati to have these colors made and that he had "placed in the centre of the azure field of stars, the arms of the State."

The national colors so presented were of U.S. regulation size and, as the governor said, bore the arms of the state in the canton together with the full quota of stars, although occasionally only a horse's head from the state seal was used. The regimental designation was painted in gold on the 4th and 5th red stripes from the top. These regiments received only national colors; apparently regimental colors were not provided at this time, and perhaps never.

In 1870 the Adjutant General asked for money "to issue a State color to each regimental organization as formed . . . of the same style as those presented by the State to the Pennsylvania regiments of the late war."

Fig. 363. Burnside Zouaves of Providence, Rhode Island, 1868. Music cover published in Providence by Cary, Brothers.

One regimental color carried by a Rhode Island regiment, the 5th Heavy Artillery, possessed some singular features. To the best of our knowledge, it is the only flag presented by one regiment to another during the Civil War. It was given to the Fifth at New Bern, N.C., on 3 August 1863, by the 44th Massachusetts for coming to its rescue during the seige of Washington, N.C. On one side of the flag was the arms of Rhode Island; on the other, the arms of the Forty-fourth, the old New England Guards of Boston, with the legend: "44th Mass-.Vols. to 5th R.I. Vols."

William A. Spicer, History of the Ninth and Tenth Regiments, Rhode Island Volunteers, and the Tenth Rhode Island Battery, . . ., Providence, R.I., 1892.

Important help on this chapter has come from Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, of Providence, and members of her staff. We are also indebted to the late Clarkson A. Collins, former Librarian of the Rhode Island Historical Society; the late Henry Jackson; and the late Miss Mary T. Quinn, Assistant for Archives, Department of State, the Office of the Adjutant General of Rhode Island, and Lieutenant Colonel Howard V. Allen, Commandant, Varnum Continentals, have also proved most helpful.

South Carolina

in the upper flagstaff corner." Two days later a resolution was adopted by the legislature providing that the design be simplified to a white crescent and white palmetto on a blue field. This is the state flag today.

For some months palmetto flags were carried by South Carolina regiments as their colors and at least one example survives today. The first color of Gregg's 1st Volunteer Infantry, used between February and May 1861, was made of two layers of silk; the obverse was white, embroidered with a green palmetto in the center and a golden crescent in the dexter corner; the reverse was green, embroidered with a large laurel wreath; the fringe was green.

The Hampton Legion, while in Richmond, was presented a color by President Davis; it was carried during much of the war. This was also a double flag and very heavy. Its fabric was satin, one side being blue and the other "solferino," and its devices resembled those of the 1st South Carolina, above. Contemporary pictures show still other palmetto flags in military use.

Battle flags of at least six volunteer regiments survived the Civil War. All were of the Army of Northern Virginia pattern and presented no unusual features. Several carried battle honors.

Union South Carolina

No organization of white troops was raised within South Carolina for the Union Army. Union sentiment was largely confined to a small number of individuals, scattered throughout the state. Probably in no other state was there such a unity for the cause of secession.

In the spring of 1862 Major General David Hunter at Port Royal, without express authority from the War Department, raised the 1st South Carolina Volunteer Regiment, the first regiment of Negroes in the Civil War. There is some evidence that Hunter originally proposed to outfit the command in zouave dress, with "baggy red trousers and braided jackets." On 3 April he wrote the Secretary of War: "It is important that I should be able to know and distinguish these men at once, and for this purpose I respectfully request that 50,000 pairs of scarlet pantaloons may be sent me; and this is all the clothing I shall require for these people." War Department approval was slow in coming and by 4 August the regiment had not been paid, its officers had not received their commissions, and there appeared to be no prospect that they would be officially mustered into service. On 10 August Hunter disbanded the regiment except for one company.

Three weeks later the War Department authorized Hunter's successor, Brigadier Gen' Rufus Saxton, to recruit Negro troops, and Captain Thomas Wentworth Higginson of the 5 rst

Benjamin R. Clyburn.

The Civil War in South Carolina 1st (McCreary's) Infantry Regiment (1st Provisional Army) (Gregg's)

HISTORICAL NOTES:

This regiment is sometimes referred to as Gregg's Regiment, although technically Col. Gregg was over a brigade, and after his death, command of the brigade went to Gen. McGowan. Command of this regiment was for a time under Col. Cormillus McCreary, hence the names.

1st Infantry Regiment, Provisional Army completed its organization at Richmond, Virginia, in August, 1861. Most of the officers and men had served in the 1st South Carolina Volunteers, a six-month command, which was mustered out of service in late July. The men were from Charleston and Columbia, and the counties of Darlington, Marrion, Horry, Aiken, and Florence. Assigned to General Gregg's and McGowan's Brigade, the unit fought with the Army of Northern Virginia from the Seven Days' Battles to Cold Harbor . It was then involved in the difficult Petersburg siege north and south of the James River and the Appomattox Campaign. This regiment lost 20 killed and 133 wounded during the Seven Days' Battles, had fifty-three percent disabled of the 283 engaged at Second Manassas and Ox Hill , and had 4 killed and 30 wounded at Sharpsburg . It sustained 73 casualties at Fredericksburg and 104 at Chancellorsville , then lost thirty-four percent of the 328 at Gettysburg . There were 16 killed, 114 wounded, and 7 missing at The Wilderness , and 19 killed, 51 wounded, and 9 missing at Spotsylvania . On April 9, 1865, it surrendered with 18 officers and 101 men.

Georgetown, Williamsburg and part of the Charleston District, the 10th South Carolina Volunteers was organized on May 31 and Arthur M. MANIGAULT elected its colonel. The recruits, whose only military qualifications were strong physiques, courage and ardent patriotism, assembled at Camp Marion near Georgetown on July 19 and the long and trying process of training in the school of the solider was begun.

the State with arms & for the public defence." Conversion and repair of older and civilian long arms was continued in the basement of the capitol.

Early in the war the state secured the services of George W. Morse, an inventor and arms expert of national standing. Under his superintendency the new State Armory produced cartridges by machinery moved from Harpers Ferry and undertook extensive arms repair and alteration. The governor was able to report on 31 July that civilian arms bought from volunteers were "being converted into the minie rifle at the rate of 300 per week" and that 30 sabers were being produced a day. Elsewhere other arms makers were busy; Mayor R. D. Baugh of Memphis had 64 "Irish pikes" made in his city for a (presumably) Irish company raised there. They were "about ten feet long, with a bayonet head for thrusting and a hook for cutting." History does not record their usage.

The State Armory at Nashville may have commenced to produce the Morse single-shot, muzzle-loading musket, using machinery supplied by the Confederate War Department. A Confederate arsenal was also located in Nashville and there was a Confederate depot in Memphis, but the usefulness of all these installations was limited by events. Nashville was evacuated on 23 February 1862, and early in the following June Memphis was captured by Federal forces.

By means of these shops, however, it was possible in 1861 for Tennessee to furnish its troops with arms of a sort. Judging from letters and regimental histories, their quality often left something to be desired. After 1862, Tennessee had to secure all its small arms from outside its borders.

Colors and Flags

The Secretary of State of the post-war state government wrote in 1866 that no official flag had ever been adopted by Tennessee and that the Volunteer Militia had been accustomed in the past to carry such regimental colors as they pleased. This may well be true, we have no record at all of any Tennessee military colors earlier than 1861. Regimental flags carried during the Civil War were commonly of two sorts: the 1861 national flag at first, then the Army of Northern Virginia battle flag. Most surviving examples carry designations and battle honors.

There were, however, several interesting variations and these bear out the remark quoted above about distinctive designs. A flag said to have been captured from a 1st Tennessee Battalion at "the Battle of Chickahominy, July 27, 1862" is made of blue silk and has what seems to have been the U.S. coat of arms within an irregular center of white. The 18th Tennessee carried at Fort Donelson an 1861 national flag "inscribed with the coat of arms of Tennessee," and the unit's designation.

The 32nd Tennessee carried this same Stars and Bars, but had the state capitol building painted on the union, surrounded by 13 stars. Still another command had "Our Right is Our Might" painted on the union in gold letters.

The most interesting flag carried by a Tennessee regiment was that of the 4th Volunteer Infantry. It was inscribed "Home Rule" and bore the "inverted cross cannon" awarded it for gallantry in the Battle of Perryville, Ky., in October 1862.

Union Tennessee

The creation of a substantial pro-Confederate military force prior to 8 June 1861, when the people of Tennessee had been instructed by their legislature to vote on the subject of secession, was felt by many East Tennesseeans to have interferred with their free expression of opinion. Union sympathizers found themselves harassed by soldiery, their meetings broken up, and in many cases they were forced to flee the state. It was from young men who had fled north from East Tennessee into Kentucky that the initial Union regiment from the state was formed at Camp Dick Robinson in August 1861.

The majority of the Union Tennessee commands were formed in this manner, outside the state in Kentucky or Ohio, from refugees. Organization and equipping were carried out at first by Federal field commanders, but once military government had been established in Middle and West Tennessee, with the capital again in Nashville, Governor Andrew Johnson commenced to assume responsibility. An Adjutant General was appointed in 1862, and soon after a home guard type of militia was formed of men favorable to the Union.

East Tennessee, where lay the strongest Union sympathy, remained longest under Confederate control. From this region the Union Army received its largest input of recruits. Refugees continued to cross the rugged mountains into Union territory and this migration brought forth a class of men called guides or pilots who undertook to conduct parties past the Confederate patrols. When Confederate conscription was announced in early 1862, large groups of young men fled East Tennessee; one party of over four hundred started in April 1862 for Cumberland Gap, only to be intercepted by a regiment of East Tennessee Confederate Cavalry and brought back to prison in Knoxville.

Altogether, the state furnished over 31,000 white troops to the Union Army. She also provided over 16 regiments of colored troops. In February 1864 the Nashville Daily Times and True Union reported that Negro regiments were being formed at the rate of five hundred men a week. The first five Negro commands were organized in 1863 and bore the state name, followed by the words "African Descent." From late 1863 forward the regiments were given designations directly as U.S. Colored Troops.

Texas

Secession brought about a revival of both the second and third national flags. The flag with the single star on a blue field appears to have been widely used as a secession banner, and traditionally this was the flag immortalized in "The Bonnie Blue Flag," composed early in 1861 at Jackson, Mississippi. Some of the mounted troops of McCulloch's forces in San Antonio, February 1861, carried it; and one flag of this kind, with a gold fringe border, is among those now preserved in Austin. A variation of this flag, in the collections of the Chicago Historical Society, is one of the two known flags carried by Terry's Texas Rangers (8th Regiment Texas Cavalry). It is made of bunting, 23 × 33 inches in size. On the blue field is a large white star with a radius of 9.5 inches. Across the top, above the star, in yellow letters, is: "Terry's Texas Rangers."

A number of Texas commands during the early part of the war, seem to have first carried the third national flag. The 1st Texas of Hood's Brigade is recorded as using it, and among the flags now preserved in Austin is one identified as this flag. Above the white star is "SEVEN PINES," and beneath it is "GAINES FARM." Both are lettered in gilt.

Many units utilized the 1861 Confederate national flag and some did not hesitate to alter its original design to their own taste. An odd example is the flag of the 5th Texas Infantry. In its blue union is a large red star inside of which are arranged ten small white stars with a large one in the center. On the reverse side, the arrangement of the stars is the same, but on a yellow union. On the white bar in the field is a shield device inside of which is "Texas" with a gilt star beneath it. Even Texas commands carrying the Army of Northern Virginia battle flag were not liverse to tampering with its design. There are four known surviving battle flags with an oversized star in the center.

Union Texas

Most Union sympathizers in Texas were found in the northern counties, and in the region about and southwestward of Austin. The inhabitants of these parts were for the most part Germans, Mexicans, and migrants from northern states, who owned few slaves and had little interest in the Southern cause. Resistance among the Unionists took two forms: active and open support of the Union, or an outward loyalty to the South that covered subversive activity. The latter form was illustrated by the objectives of the "Conspiracy of the Peace Party," organized in the northern counties in 1862. Its chief motives were to resist the draft and maintain a spy system. When drafts on the militia were made, members were instructed to enlist and desert to the Federal forces during battle.

Unionists also sought to keep out of the Confederate forces by enlisting in organizations formed for the protection of the frontier, for home defense, or for other purposes which did not require service beyond the boundaries of the state. Those who elected or were able to follow a more positive course in supporting the Union secretly formed themselves into military companies within Confederate-held territory, or joined commands that were formed within the areas held by the Federals and were regularly mustered into service.

Three companies were formed in Gillespie County in June 1861, but disbanded on their own accord about June 1862, following a brief occupation of Fredericksburg by partisan rangers sent in to capture the ringleaders and break up the companies. A company of 73 men, arm with shotguns and rifles, was reported to have been formed among the Germans of Sas. Antonio in 1862. The 1st Regiment Texas (U.S.) Cavalry was organized in New Orleans in 1862 from among Unionists refugees there, and saw subsequent service in Louisiana and Texas. The 2nd Regiment Texas (U.S.) Cavalry was formed at Brownsville in 1863, and was composed of Mexicans, Irish, and Germans. It failed to reach the required strength and was merged into the 1st Cavalry Regiment. In March 1865, the 2nd Battalion Texas (U.S.) Cavalry was organized at Brazos Santiago and, at Palmetto Ranch, three months later, clashed with Confederate Texans under Colonel John R. Ford. The Hamilton Body Guard was a cavalry company furnished to Andrew Jackson Hamilton, former Attorney General of Texas and legislator, who in 1863 was appointed Military Governor of Texas. On 26 October 1863, Captain Adrian I. Vidal's mounted company of Mexicans, which had previously performed good service for the Confederates, mutined and went over to the Union side at Brownsville on 10 November 1863.

No Negro regiments were raised in the state.

Utah Territory

this remote region where there was a general scarcity of clothing. Officers apparently were uniformed in some fashion, but with the exception of a few Volunteer organizations, enlisted men wore ordinary civilian clothing. General Daniel H. Wells, who assumed command of the Legion in the early 1850's, has been described as wearing a cocked hat with plume, gold epaulets, and pants with stripes down the outer seams. The independent mounted Battalion of Life Guards in 1852 was authorized to select its own uniform. One troop, evidently of this battalion, is known for a time to have worn a dark blue blouse and pants with a trimmed cap. Another uniformed company has been described as wearing gray blouses and white pants. These may have been among the several uniformed Volunteer companies seen during May 1857 in Salt Lake City.

Most of the Legion seems to have been poorly clad for the winter campaign of 1857. In November, recruits were seen leaving Salt Lake City with straw hats and poor shoes. A captured teamster that winter described Mormon soldiers in Echo Canyon as being a ragged collection of men, wearing old bed quilts and blankets as overcoats. The shortage of clothing became even more serious in 1858, but there was little that could be done to remedy the situation.

In contrast, as Johnston's expedition neared Salt Lake, the soldiers saw "a squadron of Mormon cavalry . . ., magnificently mounted and with silver-ornamented saddles and bridles . . . stern-looking, bearded figures, immovable in their saddles, so disguished by dust that the dearest friend could not recognize them." It is probable that these were the Life Guards.

When Camp Floyd was evacuated in 1861, a considerable quantity of U.S. Army clothing was sold. Thomas Stenhouse noted in Rocky Mountain Saints that:

For years after, the "regulation blue pants" were more familiar to the eye, in the Mormon settlements, than the Valley Tan Quaker gray, and there was scarcely an officer in the Mormon militia who was not proud to sport Uncle Sam's blue overcoat, ornamented with the fur that the Territory produced.

The territorial seal of Utah, adopted in 1850, showed a beehive on a stand surrounded by flowers, on which the date appeared: "SEPT 9th/MDCCCL." There is no record of any insignia or buttons bearing this device, or a portion of it, that can be assigned to the period 1851–1872. The territorial seal was altered in 1872 by changing the Roman figures to Arabic.

Small Arms and Accouterments

Although members were required by law to "keep and preserve in good order, one good rifle, musket, or Yauger gun, with necessary equipments," the Legion was ill-equipped for active service in 1857. No arms had ever been received from the general government. In July of that year, muster rolls of 19 companies, numbering 807 officers and men, listed only 198 muskets and 242 rifles. The Adjutant General reported that there were 6,100 militiamen in all military districts with perhaps another 1,000 efficient men available, for whom there were 2,364 rifles, 1,159 muskets, 99 pistols, and 295 revolvers. One third of the Legion, in other words, was unarmed and badly equipped.

It was evident from the beginning that some arms would have to be produced in the Territory. In March 1857, three months before the threat of invasion, the manufacture of revolvers had been started in Salt Lake City; and within two months a serviceable product was being turned out. A correspondent of the New York Herald, visiting the Salt Lake City Armory in May 1857, found that the "Mormons were busy in the manufacture of revolvers at the rate of twenty per week. The Mormons were quite pleased with the manufacture of this article, and considered it equal at least, to Colts."

A small arms plant was also in operation at Provo, 40 miles south of Salt Lake City. To meet the emergency in 1857, the legislature assumed control of gunsmithing facilities for the repair and manufacture of arms. The real need was for rifles and, in desperation, the Adjutant General even suggested that the militia be armed with the cross bow.

There were two other sources from which the Mormons sometimes were able to procure arms. Weapons were brought in by new settlers, and others were obtained from emigrants traveling through the Territory who could sometimes be forced to trade precious arms for provisions. Any hope that the Legion might find a new stock of small arms from the sales at Camp Floyd in 1861, ended when the evacuating U.S. Army troops destroyed all ordnance that could not be removed.

Colors and Flags

A unique feature of the military establishment of the Territory of Utah was the creation of a Color Department in 1852, and the subsequent provision for two "Color Bearer Generals," one of which held the rank of major of cavalry and the other, captain of cavalry. Despite this, we have no idea what the colors were. Brigham Young wrote in 1866: "We have no territorial flag. Our flag is the flag of the nation—the Stars and Stripes." Such, so far as we know, was the flag of the Nauvoo Legion.

Colors and Flags

An official Vermont state flag was adopted by the legislature in September 1866. It had thirteen alternating red and white stripes, like the national flag, and a blue union containing a white star on which was placed the central portion of the coat of arms within a circle. This flag may well have been flown at the time, but there is no indication of its having been carried as a military color in the years up to 1873. There are, in fact, no regulations whatever governing Vermont military flags in our period, and no indications of the appearance of those Active Militia flags which probably were carried before 1861.

During the Civil War the volunteer regiments carried both national and regimental colors. Fortunately, there was a high survival rate among Vermont flags (none was ever lost on the open battlefield) and today 70 flags, guidons and colors are well preserved in the rotunda of the Vermont State Capitol. Of special interest to scholars is the VI Corps Headquarters Flag of General John Sedgwick, the First Vermont Brigade's guidon, the flag of one of the Vermont companies of the 1st U.S. Sharpshooters, and the national and regimental colors of the three light artillery batteries.

The regimental colors and standards of which we have record were presentation flags and all bore the Vermont coat of arms in one way or another. Most of these had fields of blue silk, hough there were several cases of white regimental colors being presented early in the war.

Virginia

Ruskell made a flag which was presented by the ladies of Jefferson County to the 2nd Regiment of Virginia Volunteers. It was carried at First Manassas but was returned to Charlestown soon afterwards; it is now preserved at the Virginia Military Institute.

In common with those of other states, Virginia regiments also carried into action the 1861 Confederate national flag. The regiment's designation was usually placed on the horizontal white bar. The national or state flag was carried by Virginia troops on the Peninsula during the spring of 1862, and probably well into that summer, since the battle flag was relatively unknown there until the arrival of General Johnston's army in April. The national flag of 1863 was carried by at least one regiment, the 8th Virginia Cavalry. On this flag, the regimental designation was embroidered in white on the white field. This unusual standard is preserved in The Museum of the Confederacy in Richmond.

The principal collection of Virginia regimental colors is displayed in Battle Abbey in Richmond. Most of them are Army of Northern Virginia battle flags. All were made of bunting, and their sizes generally conform to those prescribed (page 000). But sometimes their original dimensions have been distorted, either from use or from post-war restoration. Most regimental designations were placed in the center of the St. Andrews cross, with the number above the star, and "VA." beneath it, but a good many have designations placed on the red background in various fashions. The bulk of the flags in the Battle Abbey were lost in battle or surrendered, and returned by the U.S. War Department in 1905.

Union Virginia

Most of the sympathizers for the Union cause in Virginia resided within the western cour that in 1861 established their own government, purporting to represent the whole state of Virginia. In 1862, however West Virginia was created as a new state and admitted to the Union on 20 June 1863. Troops from this area are described under "West Virginia."

Other than the counties that formed West Virginia, the largest area in which substantial Union sympathy was found was in Loudoun County, among the Germans and Quakers. Some Union sentiment existed along the Eastern Shore and the Potomac River.

A small number of Negro troops was raised in the state.

The 1st Virginia Infantry of the Confederate States Army was organized on May 1, 1851 from nine militia units in the Richmond area. The first commander was Colonel Walter Gwynn. Gwynn served in that capacity until 1853, when he was replaced by Thomas Pearson August. August served until 1860 when he was promoted to Brigadier General of Militia, and given command of the 2nd Brigade, 4th Division, Virginia Militia. August was followed by Colonel Patrick Theodore Moore, who served until 1862 when he was wounded and disabled. Lewis Burwell Williams, Jr. suceeded in command and led the unit until he was killed at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania on July 3, 1863. Frederick Gustavus Skinner was the final commander of the 1st Virginia, serving until the end of the war.

The Militia units which orignally formed the 1st Virginia Infantry were:

- Richmond Light Dragoons, formed in 1807. This unit ceased to exist in 1854.
- · Richmond Fayette Artillery, formed in 1824
- Richmond Grays, organized on January 29, 1844
- Richmond Eagle Infantry, organized in 1849
- Richmond Light Infantry Blues, formed on May 10, 1793
- · Richmond German Rifles, formed in 1850
- Richmond Young Guard, organized in 1850
- · Montgomery Guard, organized in 1850
- · Caledonian Guard, organized in 1851.

These companies went through various permatations before the outbreak of war in April 1861.

The unit was activated on April 21, 1861, and mustered into Confederate service on June 30, 1861. Several of the companies were detached and reassigned during the ensuing, confusing months. The 1st Virginia Infantry which was also known as the "Williams Rifles" was eventually composed of:

Company A - Richmond Grays - Reassigned as Company G, 12th VA Inf. about September 1, 1861.

Company B - Richmond City Guard - Served through out the war as part of this unit.

Company C - Montgomery Guard - Served throughout the war as part of this unit.

Company D - Old Dominion Guard - Served in this unit through 1865.

Company E - Washington Volunteers - From Washington, D.C., mustered out of service on April 26, 1862.

Company F - Beauregard Rifles - Later reassigned as Company C, 1st Virginia Artillery in 1861.

Company G - Captain William H. Gordon's Company - served in this unit through 1865.

Company H - Richmond Grays No. 2. Served with the 1st through 1865.

Company I - Captain Robert F. Morris' Company, served through the war with the 1st Virginia Infantry

. Company K - Virginia Rifles - disbaned in 1862.

Floyd Guards - Organized on April 20, 1861 - Transferred as Co. K, 2nd VA Infantry before June 30, 1861.

Band - Discharged before August 31, 1862.

The arrival of the gunboat Pawnee at Alexandria caused quite a bit of excitement. Concern arose over the increased possibility of an enemy advance from Washington. Guards were placed at the foot of Cameron Street to keep an eye on the blockading steamer. Those not on guard duty were regularly at drill by squad, by company, and by battalion—occasionally under the command of Colonel Terrett.

On May 18, another Irish company, the O'Connell Guard, was organized under Captain Stephen W. Prestman and composed largely of railroad workers. The Alexandria Gazette of May 23 carried an appeal for ladies to help make uniforms for the new company.

It was also on May 23, 1861 that the polls opened in Alexandria for the purpose of voting on ratification of the ordinance of secession. Only 106 voted in opposition, while 983 ratified the ordinance. By 2 a.m. on the 24th, Union troops had crossed the Potomac River bridges into Virginia. Steamers carrying the 11th New York Fire Zouaves under Col. Elmer E. Ellsworth arrived at the foot of King Street. As the Zouaves landed, pickets fired shots warning of the enemy's approach and began falling back toward the city. At about 3 a.m., Captain Simpson rushed to his Warren Rifles: "Wake up, boys! They are coming! By George, they are across the bridge!"

Lieutenant Reigart B. Lowry, U. S. Navy, left the Pawnee about 4:30 a.m. to meet with Colonel Terrett and demand the surrender of Alexandria. The surrender was refused and Terrett announced he would evacuate the city. He ordered the battalion to assemble at Lyceum Hall and await further orders. Learning of the enemy approach by Washington Street, the battalion was ordered to depart by way of Duke Street at about 6:50 a.m. The Old Dominion Rifles were almost captured at Peyton's Grove when they were late getting the order. Captain Herbert managed to get his riflemen up to the retreating column as it moved westward on Duke Street and avoided their capture. As they evacuated the city, they were told that James Jackson had killed Col. Ellsworth and was, himself, killed instantly by Pvt. Francis Brownell while attempting to retrieve the Confederate flag Ellsworth had removed from the roof of the Marshall House. [The Smithsonian Institution has an excellent on-line exhibit of the Marshall House incident which includes images of Jackson's shotgun, Brownell's percussion rifle, a piece of the captured flag and bloodstained floor cover.] Just west of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad depot, Terrett's command stopped several trains returning from the Springfield Station. The entire command boarded trains and traveled 27 miles to Manassas Junction.

Organization of the 12th Virginia Regiment

Weisiger, David A., Colonel 1861-1864 (to Brigadier General May 31, 1864)

Field, Everard, Colonel, 1864-1865

The 12th Virginia Regiment was organized near Norfolk in early May, 1861. The nucleus of this regiment was the 4th Battalion, Virginia Volunteers, formed in Petersburg by January 7, 1861. This battalion, under Major Weisiger, was comprised of the following companies when it left Petersburg for Norfolk on April 20, 1861:

Petersburg City Guard, Company A; organized 1828; Captain John Pegram May

Later, this would be the final organization of the regiment:

Petersburg Artillery; organized March 1862; Captain Branch (Many men from the Lafayette Guards transferred into this unit, resulting in the Lafayette Guards being filled with conscripts from Patrick County.)

The Petersburg Artillery was detached from the 4th Battalion the day following their arrival at Norfolk. The 12th Virginia Regiment was accepted into service of the Confederate States on July 1, 1861, and was reorganized May 3, 1862.

Company A, Petersburg City Guard; light infantry; enlisted April 19, 1861, for one year; reorganized May 1, 1862. Captains: John Pegram May (to Major: killed August 30, 1862), Charles E. Waddell.

Company B, Petersburg Grays, Company A: light infantry, enlisted April 19, 1861, for one year: reorganized May 1, 1862. Captains: John Lyon, Robert R. Bowden, Thomas P. Pollard.

Company C, Petersburg New Grays, Company B; light infantry; enlisted April 19, 1861, for one year; reorganized May 1, 1862. Captains: Thomas H. Hood, Louis L. Marks, Stephen G. White.

Company D, Lafayette Guard, Petersburg; light infantry; enlisted April 19, 1861; reorganized May 1, 1862. Captains: William H. Jarvis, James P Critz, James E. Tyler.

Company E, Petersburg Riflemen; light infantry; enlisted April 19, 1861, for one year; reorganized May 1, 1862. Captains: Daniel Dodson, Robert Banks, John R. Patterson.

Company F, Hufer Grays, Hicksford (now Emporia), Greenville County; organized April, 1861 enlisted at Hicksford, June 6, 1861, for one year; reorganized May 1, 1862.

Company G, Richmond Grays, Richmond; formerly Company A, 1st Regiment Virginia Volunteers; enlisted April 19, 1861, for one year; on detached service when 1st Regiment Virginia Volunteers was accepted into Confederate States service and company was accepted as of this regiment; company reorganized May 1, 1862; reported as of the 12th Regiment on returns for July and August, 1861, though company was mustered as of the 1st Regiment. Captains: Wyatt M. Elliott, Jacob V. Crawford, Edwin White Branch (killed August 1, 1863), Robert Mayo, Jr,

Company H, Norfolk Junior Volunteers, Norfolk; formerly Captain

Fergusson's Company, 6th Regiment Virginia Volunteers; organized 1802; enlisted April 19, 1861, for one year; mustered while in State service as of the 6th Regiment, and was accepted into Confederate States service as Company H, 12th Regiment. Captains: Finley F Fergusson, Thomas F. Owens (elected April, 1862).

Company I (1st), Hargrove Blues, Dinwiddie County; enlisted June 11, 1861, for one year; reorganized May 1, 1862; dropped from regimental return May, 1862; detached from 12th Regiment and Company I (2nd) substituted, as announced by S. O. No. 129, A&IGO., dated June 5, 1862, and served as an unattached company until assigned as Company H (2nd), 9th Regiment Virginia Infantry, per S. O. 382, A&IGO., dated November 28, 1863. The records of the company indicate that it belonged to the 12th Regiment until the time of that regiments's reorganization. Captains: Arthur M. Goodwyn, Archibald B. Goodwyn.

Company I (2nd), Captain Richard W. Jones' Company; enlisted February 22, 1862, for the war, and mustered in April 30, 1862, as attached to this regiment; company substituted for Company I (1st) per S. O. No. 129, A&IGO., dated June 5, 1862.

Company K, Archer's Rifles, Petersburg; riflemen; organized May 4, 1861, for one year; reorganized May 1, 1862. Captains: Fletcher H. Archer (organized company; to Lieutenant Colonel May 5, 1861, and assigned to 3rd Regiment Virginia Volunteers), John R. Lewellen, John T. Clements.

Captain James R. Branch's Company, Lee's Life Guard, Petersburg; enlisted May 11, 1861, for one year; mustered as of this regiment while in State service. When accepted into Confederate States service, the company was assigned as Company K, 16th Regiment Virginia Volunteers and was subsequently transferred to the artillery arm of the service per S. O. No. 62, A&IGO., dated March 10, 1862, finally serving as Captain Richard D. Pegram's Company Virginia Light Artillery.

West Virginia

At the end of April 1865, the state had in store 1,580 caliber .69 Belgian rifled muskets and 839 smoothbore muskets, caliber .69, plus a small stock of other arms and accouterments for 2,851 men. At the end of September 1869 the following small arms and accouterments were on hand: 820 muskets; 820 cap pouches, cartridge boxes and plates, waist belts with plates, cartridge box shoulder belt plates; 43 carbine cartridge boxes; and 38 sword bayonets. Eighty muskets and sets of accouterments were reported that year as having been issued to the Vosburg Zouaves of Martinsburg.

Insignia and Flags

The Great Seal of West Virginia was adopted 26 September 1863. The arms it displayed showed a rock bearing the inscription "June 20, 1863" and surrounded by symbols of agriculture and industry. To the right of the rock stood a farmer in a hunting-shirt, holding an axe, and on its left, a miner with pickax. In front of all these lay two crossed rifled and a liberty cap. The motto was "Montani Semper Liberi."

This seal appeared on the title page of the 1864 Report of the state Adjutant General, but it was not used on any insignia or buttons in our period. It is probable that Virginia devices were worn by some of the early companies but by and large West Virginia troops used U.S. Army insignia exclusively.

West Virginia adopted no state flag during our period. The legislature, however, on 28 January 1864, adopted a resolution authorizing and requesting the governor to present to the 4th Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, a flag "adapted to their arm of service," and "with the coat of arms of the State." Battle honors were to be placed "legibly thereupon," and these were enumerated.

From 1862 to 1864 the legislature adopted resolutions authorizing the governor to present colors to ten regiments. The first of these flags was authorized on 13 May 1862, for the 1st Regiment of Virginia Infantry. On it was to be inscribed "Winchester," as "a testimony of approbation from loyal Virginia." On 4 February 1863, a color was authorized for the 7th Infantry Regiment, with "Seventh (Union) Virginia Volunteers, Antietam, September 17th, 1862," on one side, and on the other: "Fredericksburg, Dec. 13th, 1862." The 7th Regiment was authorized another flag on 25 January 1864. Other flags provided were: 1st Cavalry (1864), 10th Infantry (1864), 6th Cavalry (1864), 7th Cavalry (formerly the 8th Infantry, 1864), and the 5th Cavalry (1864). All regiments eventually received colors.

The flags presented to the state's regiments have been described as being of deep blue silk with gold fringe, and six feet square. In the center of the obverse was the coat of arms of the state without the encircling motto or name. These were placed upon a long scroll below the coat of arms. On the reverse side was a spread eagle measuring 44 inches between wing tips. Its right talon held a sheaf of arrows and in the left was an olive branch. A floating scroll with "E. Pluribus Union" was held in the beak of the eagle.

agreed with the provisions of the Revised Regulations of 1861. Most were furnished by Gilbert Hubbard & Co. of Chicago. The national colors had their stars painted in gold in six horizontal rows, viz: 5,6,6,6,6,5. The regimental designation was painted in gold on the center stripe. The blue regimental colors bore the U.S. seal, painted in the center over a simple light red scroll bearing the unit designation in gold. Beginning with the 9th Regiment through the 19th (and including the reorganized 1st), a blue scroll with the gold letters "FORWARD" was placed over the seal as well.

With the return of several worn colors in 1863, legislation was adopted to provide each unit with a new set, and a state flag was adopted as a substitute for the regimental color of this set. Gilbert Hubbard & Co. successfully outbid its competitors for providing these flags. The national color at first bore its stars in six horizontal rows, first 6,6,5,6,6,6, but later 6,5,6,6,6,6. In 1865 this was changed to seven rows of five stars each. The regimental designation was painted in gold upon the center stripe, and battle honors were likewise painted in gold (usually two rows to a stripe) on the red stripe or stripes below it. The state flag was dark blue, the same size and description as the old regimental colors except that it bore a gilt edged gray-blue disc in its center. On the observe this disc bore a full color representation of the 1851 state seal, the sailor dressed in blue, the yeoman with a red shirt and black pants. "E. PLURIBUS UNUM" was deleted from the red scroll in the seal, but the scroll remained. On a similar disc on the reverse, the United States arms were painted with the U.S. motto in a red scroll eminating from the beak of the eagle. The regimental designation was painted in gold on mple red scroll beneath these discs, on both sides of the flag. At least one state color (that of the 17th Infantry) was ordered with battle-honors inscribed thereupon.

In 1864 the governor attempted to secure these colors through the U.S. Quartermaster-General. When that office refused to provide anything other than "regulation" flags, the legislature adopted new enactments that permitted the governor to continue to supply the state flag. National and state flags were accordingly furnished by the state until the end of the war. These flags are now displayed in the Capitol museum in Madison.
