BOMBARDMENT OF FORT
 NOTWITHSTANDING the loss of our gallant fleet of Monitors, public attention is still strongly attracted to the operations of and front of Spanish vessels. It was the first event of the war which was generally judged that the engagement would be a decisive one.
 April, for while many assumed that continued the bombardment for a Fort Sumter would have been the maintain with equal pertinacity the rebel forts and batteries were blown and finally every minute, and that received a second bombardment in with

WILL NOT BREAK.

The Patent Fireproof Conical Chimney for Coal Oil Lamps are made for the Million!

This invention has a combination of advantages over the glass chimneys. First—they will not break by heat or falling. They are an ornament to the lamp. They will save oil. The Conical Chimney is so constructed as to admit of expansion and contraction without injury. They will fit all the burners now in use. Try them. AMOS HORNING, Agent for Manufacturer.

SIEGE OF CHARLES

THE bombardment of Fort Mifflin by the batteries on the Pennsylvania side of the Schuylkill River, Sept. 26, 1777, was of the most desperate character. The British, after a long and bloody struggle, captured the Fort, and the Continental Congress fled to Lancaster, then to York, and finally to Philadelphia. The British entered the city on September 26, 1777, and the Continental Army spent the winter of 1777-78 at Valley Forge. The siege of Fort Mifflin was a decisive battle in the American Revolutionary War.

Illustrations

There are no known photos or drawings of James R. O'Neill or his family.

The engraving of the cavalry charge at the Battle of Honey Springs is signed by O'Neill, the only one of his published illustrations to bear his signature. From Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, 29 Aug. 1863. (It is in the public domain)

The engraved portrait of Brig. Gen. James Lane is unsigned but is believed to have been from a drawing done by O'Neill. He was known to have been drawing portraits of a number of Kansas officers at Fort Leavenworth during this period of time. From Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, 17 Aug. 1861. (Public domain)

The four political cartoons are believed to be O'Neill's work. From Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, 2 May 1863 (The Great Vermin Killer); 23 May 1863 (Winning and Wearing); 17 Oct. 1863 (posthumously, Uncle Sam...), and 19 Dec. 1863 (posthumously, Indecent Haste of the Emperor Maximilian...) (Public domain)

Two photos of the Baxter Springs Cemetery's federal section, dedicated in 1869, when the bodies of James O'Neill, the Brigade Band members and others killed in the Oct. 6, 1863 action, were reinterred here. The granite monument was erected by the United States government. Photos courtesy of Larry O'Neal, Baxter Springs Museum and Heritage Center. (Photos were given by O'Neal to the author and are the author's personal property)

Sheet music cover includes a later photo (bottom, center) of Professor Charles MacEvoy of Chicago, who, in 1859-1861 toured Midwestern cities providing music and narration for O'Neill's moving panorama, Tour of Ireland. (Public domain)

Kansas State Historical Society, Topeka, KS, has photos of Maj. General James G. Blunt (there are several in your collection) KSHS also has period photos of various relevant places, e.g., city and Fort Leavenworth. (e.g. KSHS 100047, 102799, etc.)

THE GREAT VERMIN SELLER—A NUISANCE.
 JOHN BULL—“Here you are—practical vermin—best manufacture—genuine British make.
 Warranted to scare all creation. Who'll buy? Who'll buy?”

THE GREAT VERMIN SELLER—A NUISANCE.

UNCLE SAM—“Now, you young rascal Bull, I've caught you.—If you dare to fire another I'll lam you! You've done enough damage already, but I'll make your mother pay every cent of it.”

WINNING AND WEARING.

DOUBTFUL CITIZEN—Sir, do you sell Copperhead Badges? I want one.

PATRIOTIC STOREKEEPER—This is the only badge you Copperheads deserve. (Doubtful citizen wears it for some days.)
