FASHIONS FOR JUNE.

How lovely are the beautiful organdies this season!!! (I mark the exclamation with three notes of admiration, and tell my readers so lest the printers should leave them out.) And how beautiful the diaphonous, snowy muslins; and the pale, delicate hues of transparent gauze-like bareges. To those who prefer them give the rustling silks, and rich brocades, and trailing velvets; for me the fairy like structures of fluted muslin, and ruffled barege, and the folds on folds of gauzy lace and tulle. The skirts so ample, flowing, and waving in exquisite hues.

The following are a few of the summer dresses which have delighted my eyes since last my pen dotted down the novelties in fashion for this column. A dress of pale rose-colored grenadine, trimmed with two bands of silk a shade deeper than the dress. The upper band is edged with pendant trimming. The corsage is made round—a style coming into high favor again—and a wide silk belt to match the bands on the skirt is fastened in front with one of the new and beautiful glass buckles just brought in fashion on coat sleeves.

A suitable bonnet for such a dress would be one made of rose crepe, trimmed with a darker shade of ribbon, a light barege or lace mantle, and rose-colored gloves. Another beautiful dress was of white organdie, sprigged with a tiny blue blossom, and having a flounce around the bottom set on in box plaits, and headed with a cord of blue silk, a French waist, with wide belt and buckle, and voluminous sleeves gathered into a tight band at the wrist.

A beautiful walking suit may thus be described: Elegant barege, black, trimmed with pale purple chenille fringe, and looped up with embroidered bands of the same over a skirt to match, finished off at the bottom with a fluted flounce, trimmed and set on with purple gimp. Short sacque of the same trimmed to match, and bonnet of black lace, lavishly trimmed with purple violets.

Almost all dresses are looped low, for the parlor and drawing room as well as the street; the short skirt, of course, is suitable only for walking or negligence; and when the dress is looped for indoors, the underskirt must always correspond with the dress, and should be worn as long as the usual dress skirt when not looped up. This is an expensive style of dress, as it necessitates almost a double dress—but why speak of extravagance in these days? We have got past even thinking on that subject.

Trimmings for all articles of ladies' wear continue as varied and as absolutely necessary as ever. One of the latest freaks introduced in Paris, and which has already shown symptoms of being in this city, is the rage for steel and straw ornaments and trimmings. A witty English writer describes the extent to which this passion is carried in France in the following manner:

"Jet ornaments, dear ladies, which have been all the rage for some time past, are falling into disuse. The run is now upon steel. The quantity of minute marine stores worn by the fair ladies of France is astonishing. There are steel bonnets, and the woman with the Iron Mask may soon rival the mysterious man of that ilk. Steel bracelets, steel colors, steel decorated fans, reticules and parasols, steel brooches, fringes and tassels, and trimmings of steel, glitter on the graceful forms of the gracefulest ladies in christendom.

"After steel comes straw. The ladies appear to have unlearned their old straw bonnets and stuck them all over their dresses. A mantle or jacket tesselated with real straw in fantastic devices, is much patronized, and imitation straw for fringe is becoming universal. A black lace mantle thickly seme, or powdered with tiny straw balls, very much resembling pommes de terre santees, has attracted considerable attention."

When not carried to excess, this straw trimming is very pretty. On a bonnet of Mrs. Mulchinnock's made of black transparency, tiny straw stars profusely besprinkled over the entire bonnet, had a very pretty and unique effect. At the back was a curious and fantastic device of straw, representing a bunch of flowers of various kinds, tied with a long straw card and tassels. The ornaments adorning and transfixing the waterfall, or other arrangement of hair at the back, which now supplies the place of the bonnet crown and curtain, are every day increasing in beauty. A gold dagger is a great favorite; as is also a contrivance resembling a knife and fork with jeweled handles. For evening wear the hair is worn a little crimped in front and three bands of narrow gold ribbon are bound round the head in the antique Greek style. The hair at the back is worn curled and arranged in a neat compact bunch of ringlets. For faces suited to this style-coiffure, it is extremely beautiful and becoming. The bands may be formed of ribbon or narrow velvet of any color most suitable to the wearer's complexion. All kinds of beads, also, gold, silver, steel, crystal, jet, may be worn in any device to suit the fancy, on the bands.

Wreaths, still worn by youthful ladies, have taken an entirely new shape; instead of being round, as formerly, they are bent so as to set at the top instead of behind the back hair, and thus form a circular floral comb. Another fashionable and becoming head dress is the toque formed of black velvet, and ornamented with filagree gold butterflies and beads.

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

CASTOR OIL.—This valuable nursery medicine is often very disgusting to children. Perhaps the best mode of disguising its nauseous taste is by boiling a cupful of new milk, sweetened with sugar, flavor with one or two drops of essence of almond, then pour in the oil, which will rise to the surface, or it may be shaken in a bottle and the child will drink it readily. Many nurses prefer the best sweet or salad oil for infants, it being less likely to bind the bowels after.

FOR A COMMON COUGH.—When a child has a cough from a common cold, the best plan is to put its feet into warm water before going to bed, and give a cup of hot tea, or of treacle-posses, to induce perspiration; this is made by stirring a table-spoonful of molasses into half a pint of new milk, when curdled it should be strained, and the whey given to the patient. If the cough continue dissolve a quarter of an ounce of manna in two table-spoonfuls of water, let it stand for twelve hours, then strain it, and add two table-spoonfuls of new milk. This quantity may be taken every morning till the cough is removed.

TO REMOVE WARTS.—Children are liable to these disfiguring excrescences on the hands, which spread if not immediately attended to. They may be removed by dissolving washing soda in water to the consistency of cream, and applying it to the warts regularly night and morning.

REMEDY FOR CROUP.—Dissolve as much camphor as it will contain in a pint of brandy; dip a piece of new flannel into it, and hold it before the fire a minute to warm, then apply it to the chest and throat, holding it on till the spirit has evaporated; then renew the application till the breathing is relieved.
