TO OUR READERS.

When the contest was entered into with Messrs. Bowne & O'Leary to print this paper for the neighbors of the village of Pleasant Valley, on the 18th of June (yesterday), and that this morning's issue of Fair Voice would be the last printed by that establishment, we should far exceed the most extravagant anticipations of its proprietors and managers as to warrant the continuance of the publication. Although it has only existed, originally intended, but to stop the publication of the paper until the Fair closed, it has been found necessary to publish it on a daily basis. It will hereafter be published only twice a week—every Wednesday and Saturday.

The chief object of the publication of the paper was to make it the medium through which thousands of people can communicate with each other, and to inform the inhabitants of this and the surrounding districts of the progress of the Fair. And it is to be hoped that the editors will not fail to discharge their duties to the satisfaction of the readers and that the publication of the Fair Voice will be continued until the end of the Fair.

The Fair Voice will also publish the results of the contests in various classes, as well as the prices of the premiums awarded.

FAIR GROSBY.

The crowds continue to throng the great halls, and everybody seems to feel just as much interest in every part of the grand exhibition as ever. Indeed, the whole city seems to be alive with activity. The weather has been very favorable, and it appears that the people are not tired of the festival. It is to be hoped that the weather will continue to be favorable.

The Fair Voice was on hand yesterday, and we observed that the crowds were quite large. The weather was fine, and the Fair Voice will continue to publish the results of the contests in various classes, as well as the prices of the premiums awarded.

FAIR GROSBY.

The crowds continue to throng the great halls, and everybody seems to feel just as much interest in every part of the grand exhibition as ever. Indeed, the whole city seems to be alive with activity. The weather has been very favorable, and it appears that the people are not tired of the festival. It is to be hoped that the weather will continue to be favorable.

The Fair Voice was on hand yesterday, and we observed that the crowds were quite large. The weather was fine, and the Fair Voice will continue to publish the results of the contests in various classes, as well as the prices of the premiums awarded.

FOOTNOTE.

The season of picnics is upon us, and right now is the time to take advantage of the beautiful weather by enjoying a picnic. One or more excursions leave nearly every day, and on Saturdays a half dozen excursions depart, so it is time to start planning your next picnic. You can enjoy a day in the countryside, pick berries, or even engage in a game of croquet or tennis at the bottom of the hill. And this annual one-day outing is all that illustrates the wonder of nature, and how it is to be enjoyed. Go out and have a picnic, but be sure to take your umbrella, as it is likely to rain.

SOLIDARIES LETTERS.

A New York, just published, containing a solidarity letter, "The Solidarist," is for sale at the Episcopal Department for the benefit of the Fair. The book is edited by J. D. Garthwaite.

The letters contained in this volume, with one or two exceptions, have not been published before, and are entirely new. They are by leading solidarists for the benefit of the Fair, and are intended to appeal to all classes of people.

The letters are written in a lively style, and are designed to appeal to all classes of people.

SOLIDARIES LETTERS.

A New York, just published, containing a solidarity letter, "The Solidarist," is for sale at the Episcopal Department for the benefit of the Fair. The book is edited by J. D. Garthwaite.

The letters contained in this volume, with one or two exceptions, have not been published before, and are entirely new. They are by leading solidarists for the benefit of the Fair, and are intended to appeal to all classes of people.

The letters are written in a lively style, and are designed to appeal to all classes of people.

SOLIDARIES LETTERS.

A New York, just published, containing a solidarity letter, "The Solidarist," is for sale at the Episcopal Department for the benefit of the Fair. The book is edited by J. D. Garthwaite.

The letters contained in this volume, with one or two exceptions, have not been published before, and are entirely new. They are by leading solidarists for the benefit of the Fair, and are intended to appeal to all classes of people.

The letters are written in a lively style, and are designed to appeal to all classes of people.

SOLIDARIES LETTERS.

A New York, just published, containing a solidarity letter, "The Solidarist," is for sale at the Episcopal Department for the benefit of the Fair. The book is edited by J. D. Garthwaite.

The letters contained in this volume, with one or two exceptions, have not been published before, and are entirely new. They are by leading solidarists for the benefit of the Fair, and are intended to appeal to all classes of people.

The letters are written in a lively style, and are designed to appeal to all classes of people.

SOLIDARIES LETTERS.

A New York, just published, containing a solidarity letter, "The Solidarist," is for sale at the Episcopal Department for the benefit of the Fair. The book is edited by J. D. Garthwaite.

The letters contained in this volume, with one or two exceptions, have not been published before, and are entirely new. They are by leading solidarists for the benefit of the Fair, and are intended to appeal to all classes of people.

The letters are written in a lively style, and are designed to appeal to all classes of people.

SOLIDARIES LETTERS.

A New York, just published, containing a solidarity letter, "The Solidarist," is for sale at the Episcopal Department for the benefit of the Fair. The book is edited by J. D. Garthwaite.

The letters contained in this volume, with one or two exceptions, have not been published before, and are entirely new. They are by leading solidarists for the benefit of the Fair, and are intended to appeal to all classes of people.