VOICE OF THE FAIR.

ANDREW SHUMAN, Editor.

Chicago, Wednesday, June 7, 1883.

FAIR GROUND.

The popular verdict of that the Fair is a success is growing more and more pronounced, as the receipts are large. We do not know the precise figures at this writing, but may safely estimate the takings of the receipts for the first week at one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

The general appearance of the exhibition halls is of a very creditable character. The walls are white and clean, the floors new and shined. Not a single smudge is to be seen on the walls or in the aisles. The arrangement of the rooms is also of a very creditable character, and we have not noticed any feature or some new attraction or some striking feature that we had not noticed before, whenever we were in Chicago last year. It is to be seen on the Fair this year, where there are so many novelties and curiosities that it would require forty days to see but a fraction of the "fair king" of the world.

We are happy to learn that M. George L. Stearns, the eminent painter, has placed in the Fine Arts Building a series of his pictures. It is a matter of great interest to Americans that so few, if any, paintings of the country possess. M. Carpentier also has a tryst in art's gallery of the people's fair.

The man who goes into crowds with a crowd that knew his name, turning his back on the houses, standing on the first floor of the Fine Arts Building and the Fair last evening. He seemed quite happy in making others companies. The sun, with its rays of light, is on the Fair, and the building, and the crowd, and the sun, and the man, are all in motion. It is a fine scene.

There is a Police Department in the Fair, at least as much as on the fair, and perhaps the fair. The work of the Department is in charge of Mr. Bryan, Superintendent of the Fair, and his assistants.

The visitors to the Fair are more numerous and more fashionable than last year. The dress of the fair is in every respect a matter of great interest. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made.

The visitors to the Fair are more numerous and more fashionable than last year. The dress of the fair is in every respect a matter of great interest. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made.

We regret to learn that the estimable lady of Mr. Bryan, Superintendent of the Fair, is in hospital.

Major Gen. W. T. Sherman will probably visit Chicago, to attend the Fair, with his family; and we hope he will visit our exhibition.

The visitors to the Fair are more numerous and more fashionable than last year. The dress of the fair is in every respect a matter of great interest. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made.

The visitors to the Fair are more numerous and more fashionable than last year. The dress of the fair is in every respect a matter of great interest. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made.

The visitors to the Fair are more numerous and more fashionable than last year. The dress of the fair is in every respect a matter of great interest. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made. The dresses are of the most expensive material, and are beautifully made.

We regret to learn that the estimable lady of Mr. Bryan, Superintendent of the Fair, is in hospital.