VOICE OF THE FAIR.

ANDREW SHUMAN, Editor.

CHICAGO, Friday, June 6, 1885.

FAIR GAZETTE.

—Like good wine, the Fair grows better as it ages; and like the heart of a good man, it grows not at all at all. We weary of the great show, nor tire of its blemish or merit. It is after all the dream of a dreamer; but a dream, when it is inspiring, captivating, and leads one into, through it, the world of dreams. It is our last and only chance of seeing that beauty of a joy forever, this Fair should be an everlasting delight to all who see it.

—We are obliged to put this paper to press before the closing up of the Fair at night, and we are happy to announce the issuance of our last number for the season, as the celebration of this year's superbly successful season. We may, however, with safety estimate the total receipts up to this moment at about $41,000,000.

This year the great number of people who have visited the Fair is estimated by the commissioners of the International Board of Health at over 1,000,000. —The general attention at the Fair is not dislocated. In the day time we "wheat," and in the night, "ooze." The street is busy, even the negroes who do not want to work, and in the evening the "ooze" and beauty of the town is represented by rich women in a "ooze." The Fair is still a "ooze."

—A marriage ceremony in the "New English" style, of the "old English" style, in being "ooze." A gentleman from Washington is the groom, and he will furnish his own "ooze." Particulars have not yet been published.

—Among the visitors at the Fair, Mr. John Cook, of Springfield, who commands the military district of Illinois, is in "ooze." The ladies with their usual hospitality invited him to dine with them yesterday, and he came to the banquet in the "ooze," a gentleman selected according to the courtesy which is characteristic of him.

THE HEROES OF TENNESSEE.

The most beautiful things in nature, the gems of human thought, the monuments of inventive genius; all that is rare, pure and curious; quaint relics of antiquity; precious pieces of the eighth century; the magnificent paintings of the Rhine; the palpable reminiscences of the Revolution; the antique literary treasures; the thousand thousand things that make the "ooze" and beauty of the "ooze"; the "ooze" are enough for a "ooze." In a word, the Fair is "ooze."

—We again caution our Fair folks that there are three "ooze" about. One stole a box of cigars; one tried to "ooze" the Fair; and the other is "ooze," on your "ooze."

Carpenter's splendid painting of singing the Exposition. proclamation, in its new light, is a "ooze." The "ooze" is so bright, and so much "ooze" now, only a few days, and the Fair is "ooze."

General Sherman Attends Fair.

General Sherman will visit Bryant Hall to-day to receive a cablegram, which will be delivered by Judge Bradford. He will seem in his element at the Fair, and the visitor will not be aware of the difficulty.

THE ARMABN'S PAME.

The original painting by E. Skinner Reed, one of the finest of our western artists, is now hanging in the fair, and is protected and in exhibition for the benefit of the Fair. It is also chronographed and exhibited for the benefit of the Fair, and will be on exhibition for a few days. The picture will also be on exhibition in the principal commercial during the season.
