

MY HEAVENLY BIRD.

Out of the deeps of heaven
A bird has flown to my door,
As twice in the ripening summers
Its mates have flown before.

Why has it flown to my dwelling,
Nor it now I may know;
And only the silent angels
Can tell where it shall go.

That it will not straightway vanish
But fold its wings with me,
And sing in the greenest branches
Till the axe is laid on the tree,

Is the prayer of my love and terror,
For my soul is in sore distress,
Lest I wake some dreadful morning,
And find but its empty nest!

Lord Houghton, (late Sir Monckton Milner,) has sent some autographs to the North Western Sanitary Fair, as well as photographs of his face of sunshine. We append one of the former, with the remark that others of these true friends of ours may be found when the Fair opens, amongst
" Our Foreign Friends ":

MENTAL AFFLICTION.--Cudgeling one's brains for an idea.
